The image above illustrates the concept of a network with different layers of information. The network consists of nodes and edges, representing entities and relationships, respectively. The layers indicate different levels of abstraction or granularity, with each layer providing more detailed information than the one below it. The network is depicted in a hierarchical structure, with the top layer being the most general and the bottom layer being the most specific. This representation helps in understanding the flow of information and the relationships between different components of the network.


